

The Fournier family began making cider in 1943. Located in South Normandy in the middle of Dukes of Alençon province, the landscape offers a mix between green valleys and the strong hills where and pear trees grow. The apples and pears used for their cides are grown in their own orchards, on shallow clay-limestone hillsides.